

Meet DHG's Clinical Nurse Specialist, Jade Moss

Get to know Jade...

Hello, my name is Jade Moss. When I first embarked on my access course, I wanted to become a Midwife but then felt that Nursing was my calling. I studied at the University of Northampton and completed my clinical hours at Northampton General Hospital where I had a range of placements from Ophthalmology, Oncology to District Nursing which is where I developed my passion for wound care. My final placement was on a Colorectal Bowel Ward which is where I started my first Nursing position. During my 5 years on the ward, I became the ward Tissue Viability Link Nurse where I trained in additional competencies such as negative pressure wound therapy.

Following this, I applied for a Fellowship – a seconded post to work alongside falls, infection control and tissue viability teams. Here, I enhanced my knowledge within these specialisms and created a framework for change to improve patient harms.

The Wound Care Plan that I developed and implemented is now audited and Trust wide and has consequently the use of the Wound Care Plan has improved appropriate dressing use from 24% to 76%. After completing the Fellowship, I continued to work within the Tissue Viability Team and moved into a Shared Decision-Making Facilitator role where I worked closely with ward and departments to improve patient outcomes and wellbeing.

I have always pioneered change for positive patient outcomes, which is why I am pleased to join DHG as Clinical Nurse Specialist and drive improved patient outcomes, pressure ulcer prevention and wound care best practices on a national level.

Q&A with DHG's Clinical Nurse Specialist, Jade Moss

Jade is available to answer any pressure ulcer prevention questions you have!
To ask Jade a question, please email jade.moss@directhealthcaregroup.com

