

Clinical Review: Omega

The following clinical review of the Omega chair was carried out by UK based Independent Occupational Therapist and Owner of EJB Therapy, Ellie Burcher.

“As an OT working with a variety of complex seating needs I have found the Omega chair unbeatable for clients where safety and postural support are the key priorities, such as those with Huntington's disease and other neurological conditions.

The strong chair frame is very robust and can withstand strong involuntary limb movements, whilst its soft covering ensures maximum comfort.

The angled seat and deep armrests help to support clients in an aligned sitting position important for feeding, breathing and social interaction. This can also reduce the need for additional postural accessories or positioning aids.”
